

Summary of Proposed Regulations

This article is provided to summarize the proposed regulations to complement the new agency statute, and more specifically, outline the requirements of the proposed regulation 4 CSR 250-8.095. The Commission has considered questions and concerns regarding the original proposals and has amended the regulations where possible to accommodate concerns while maintaining maximum protection of the public. The following is an overview of the new proposals:

1. 4 CSR 250-8.090 - The regulation will now require that the broker hold a current listing agreement or other written authorization to advertise or place a sign on a property offering it for sale or lease. It will basically prohibit a licensee associated with one brokerage from advertising another brokerage's listing.

Also, the regulation has been expanded to cover the three basic types of brokerage service agreements: 1) listing agreements, 2) buyer's agency agreements, and 3) other written authorization. The Commission has expanded the items required in each agreement to include the licensee's duties and responsibilities. The new statute requires that specific duties be identified in the agency agreement to create a limited agency relationship. Each licensee should examine their agreements to determine whether or not the agreements create a limited agency relationship. If the agreements do not create a limited agency relationship, the licensee is acting as another type of agent with respect to the Broker Disclosure Form. If the licensee is acting under an "other" type of agency relationship, the written policy on agency must authorize this type of relationship. The regulation spells out the items required in all types of agency agreements. One important new item, which will be required in a listing agreement, is a statement concerning the presumption of buyer's agency. This item corresponds with the proposed regulation 4 CSR 250-8.095.

2. 4 CSR 250-8.095 - This regulation was rewritten in response to concerns of licensees regarding oral disclosure prior to showing, when the first showing is also the first substantial contact with the unrepresented customer. In this scenario, the licensee makes an appointment to show a property with the listing agent and meets the potential buyers for the first time at the property. The prior regulation would have required the licensee to present the Broker Disclosure Form, establish an agency relationship, and, if hired as a buyer's agent, make a second phone call to the listing agent to orally disclose this relationship, all prior to showing the property.

Since the statutes create a presumption of buyer's agency, the proposed regulation has eliminated oral disclosure of a licensee's buyer's agency relationship to a seller who is represented by another licensee. Oral disclosure is still required prior to showing by a licensee acting as a seller's agent or subagent of the seller's agent, or as a buyer's agent or subagent of the buyer's agent showing unlisted property. Remember that any licensee associated with a listing brokerage that does not offer designated agency has an agency status as a seller's agent. Per the statute, 339.780, RSMo, a licensee who has an agency status must provide the Broker Disclosure Form to an unrepresented customer prior to engaging in any of the acts enumerated in 339.010, RSMo.

At this point the licensee has two options to consider:

1. The first is that the licensee can present the Broker Disclosure Form, discuss agency with the customers, and establish an agency relationship prior to showing. If these customers do not wish to hire the licensee as a buyer's agent, the licensee would then orally disclose his subagency status and show them the property. (This assumes that a unilateral offer of subagency has been made or that a written agreement of subagency between the licensees exists and subagency is offered by the sellers.) If the licensee was hired as a buyer's agent, no oral disclosure would be required as the presumption of buyer's agency is already in place.

2. The second option is to show the property to the unrepresented buyer under the presumption of buyer's agency as allowed by statute. If this option is selected, it is then critical for the licensee to determine when first substantial contact occurs. Regulation 4 CSR 250-8.097 has been amended to clarify that the Broker Disclosure Form shall be provided upon obtaining any personal or financial information. Again, this is a guideline and does not indicate that the first substantial contact cannot occur prior to this event. If no substantial contact occurs during this first showing, the licensee can provide the Broker Disclosure Form as the relationship develops while paying attention to compliance with 339.770.1, RSMo and 4 CSR 250-8.097. The presumption of buyer's agency will be realized if the licensee is hired as a buyer's agent.

If the licensee is not hired by the buyer as a buyer's agent, if no substantial contact has occurred, and if subagency is offered by the seller, the licensee may still become a subagent for this or subsequent properties.

There is, however, a potential risk for a licensee showing property under the presumption of buyer's agency. The problem occurs when the buyer gives the licensee personal or financial information during the showing and then does not wish to hire the licensee as a buyer's agent when the licensee provides the Broker Disclosure Form. The licensee now has information learned under the presumption of buyer's agency but has not subsequently been hired as a buyer's agent. This may prohibit other agency relationships for this licensee for this particular transaction.

Written agency disclosures are required in all instances. The licensee shall make written disclosure of the licensee's agency status no later than the offer to purchase. The written disclosures are required by the selling agent (the agent procuring the buyer or tenant). The disclosure is required to be signed and dated by the disclosing licensee and the party or parties not represented by that licensee.

In dual agency, oral disclosure to all parties is required upon the occurrence of this agency status. Written disclosure is required no later than the offer to purchase. Two issues have been clarified by the proposed regulation. The first is that the oral and written disclosure of the selling licensee (licensee procuring the buyer) will serve as disclosures for both the listing licensee and designated broker. The second is in regards to a designated broker who becomes a dual agent in a designated agency transaction due to broker supervision but does not personally represent any of the parties. In this situation, the designated broker, will not be required to make disclosures, provided he or she has previously obtained written consent by all parties pursuant to the statute.

3. 4 CSR 250-8.097 - The regulation has been amended to clarify that in any event, the Broker Disclosure Form must be given upon obtaining any personal and financial information. This requirement gives further direction for determining when first substantial contact occurs. The regulation also requires that the Broker Disclosure Form be completed in its entirety.

The above information has not covered each and every possibility which can occur during the development of an agency relationship. This information is provided to give a general overview of the proposed regulations when put into practice. It is imperative that the licensee become knowledgeable of both the agency statute and the regulations and read them in conjunction with each other to gain full knowledge.

Agency: Questions & Answers

Presented below are various questions the Commission has received since the September 1, 1997 implementation of the agency law. We hope the answers and scenarios presented here will be advantageous to all licensees.

Office Policy

QUESTION: Did I have to have a policy "manual" in place by September 1, 1997

ANSWER: The statute does not require a broker to have a policy "manual". However, the statute does require a broker to have a written policy statement in place by September 1, 1997 regarding the types of agency relationships he will allow his agents to offer to the public. The policy must identify and describe each type of relationship the company is offering. The definition or explanation of the various types of relationships are outlined in the statute.

QUESTION: If a broker has a current license, but does not actively list, sell or manage property, do they have to have a written office policy?

ANSWER: Yes, the law affects all brokers who maintain a current active Missouri license. Therefore, they must establish and maintain the written policy statement required by the statute. This includes brokers who do not have any salespeople associated with them.

QUESTION: Does the written policy also serve as written authorization for affiliated licensees to enter into such agreements for brokerage services on behalf of the designated broker as required by 339.780, RSMo?

ANSWER: The written policy may serve as written authorization provided the authorization is specifically included in the policy statement.

Designated Agency

QUESTION: A broker has numerous licensees who often work as a "team" of two or three licensees at a time. Does "designated agency" mean absolutely no more than one agent will be allowed to represent each side of the transaction?

ANSWER: No, multiple agents may be identified to represent a client in a designated agency situation.

QUESTION: Can a team of two or three represent each side of a transaction in a "designated agency" situation? (Each team would be made up of different people.)

ANSWER: Yes, a team of two or three may be designated by the broker or managing broker; however, the name of each team member must be identified.

Showing Unlisted Property

QUESTION: Can a licensee show an unlisted commercial property to a represented buyer?

ANSWER: Yes, if the licensee represents the buyer as a buyer's agent or subagent, the licensee can show an unlisted commercial property to the buyer.

QUESTION: Can a licensee show an unlisted residential property to a represented buyer?

ANSWER: Yes, however the licensee must obtain written authorization from the seller to permit them to show the property.

Agency Disclosure

QUESTION: Previously a licensee was required to sign an agency disclosure when acting as a seller's agent, buyer's agent or dual agent. Does this requirement still exist, and further, is it now also required that the agency disclosure be signed by a licensee in a designated agency situation or in all agency situations?

ANSWER: Written agency disclosures are required in all agency situations.

Agency Agreements

QUESTION: Does the broker need to obtain written authorization to become a dual agent at the time he/she enters into a written agency agreement or can a written dual agency disclosure signed by all parties serve as the authorization?

ANSWER: The broker must have written authorization. This may be found in the employment agreement. If not provided for there, the broker will need to have a separate written authorization prior to acting in a dual agency capacity.

QUESTION: Why do I have to have a written buyer's agency agreement when the new statute states that I am presumed to be a buyer's agent.

ANSWER: The presumption is for the benefit of the other side of the transaction to ensure that confidential information is not disclosed to a potential buyer's agent. You still need a written agreement allowing you to actually represent the buyer to work on his behalf.

QUESTION: When I disclose that I am a designated seller's agent the prospective buyer that I have shown the property to states, "I want a buyer's agent." Can I become the buyer's agent (dual agent) if I have permission from the sellers to become a dual agent?

ANSWER: Yes, for this particular property, the licensee would be a dual agent. A licensee must obtain written permission from all parties to become a dual agent.

Cooperative Agreement
